

when the power of Wall Street can overwhelm and overcome the determination of the American people to reform it, to get that cop back on the beat on Wall Street.

We will know tomorrow morning or tomorrow afternoon very early as to whether Wall Street's effort to thwart this Chamber's majority view that the Merkley-Levin reform be voted on—and a majority that would clearly adopt it—whether Wall Street succeeds or not we will know, at least short term, by about noon or 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

I yield the floor.

TRIBUTE TO RICHARD MOE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize Mr. Richard Moe on the occasion of his retirement for the outstanding contributions he has made during his half-century career in American politics and the preservation of our Nation's rich heritage. On May 31st, he will retire as the National Trust for Historic Preservation's seventh president after 17 years of distinguished work and achievement. He will have been the longest serving president since Congress chartered that organization back in 1949 to protect some of the country's most important historic places.

His legacy, however, is not just limited to a litany of successes in the preservation of our most treasured historic and cultural resources. That stewardship alone is an accomplishment beyond measure because of the priceless value these places and objects provide us and subsequent generations of Americans into posterity. In honoring Richard Moe's decades of work, though, I would be remiss if I did not call attention to his great devotion to public service as well. Some of those years were spent right here in the Halls of the Senate when he worked for our esteemed former colleague, Walter Mondale. It would be difficult to understand his deep commitment to the Nation and its heritage, a hallmark of his presidency at the National Trust, without mentioning his dedication to serving the American people through those whom our voters have elected.

A native of Duluth, MN, Richard Moe graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in political science from Williams College in Massachusetts. He began his career in politics as administrative assistant to Minneapolis Mayor Arthur Naftalin in 1961 and then as administrative assistant to Minnesota Lieutenant Governor A. M. Keith until 1966. He studied law at the University of Minnesota and passed the Minnesota State bar in 1967. That same year, he became financial director of the Minnesota Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party, eventually rising to chairman, the second youngest in DFL's history. He held that post until 1972, when he joined the Washington office of Senator Mondale and served as his administrative assistant. In 1977, Richard Moe became Vice President Mondale's chief of staff and a member of President Carter's senior staff where he undertook a number of special assignments on behalf of that administration. Following those years at the White House, he joined the Washington office of the New York law firm Davis, Polk & Wardwell and became a partner.

In 1993, he was selected president of the National Trust and forever changed the face of that important organization. Richard Moe's leadership there has taken the organization and the historic preservation movement into the 21st century. His first goal was to make it financially independent and strong. A major portion of the National Trust's funding used to come from the Federal Government. This is no longer the case. The National Trust now adheres to his more entrepreneurial focus on building relationships with private funders. As a result, and through two capital campaigns, the organization's endowment increased by $200 million during his Presidency.

He has broadened the National Trust's original congressional mandate far beyond the red velvet cords of house museums and brought historic preservation into the full and diverse spectrum of the national public policy arena. When in 1993 the Manassas National Battlefield Park and the surrounding countryside were threatened by an incompatible theme park and commercial development, he rallied such opposition to sprawl, poor planning, and the loss of our country's open spaces that the proposal was defeated.

He has focused his organization's attention beyond the importance of just protecting the historic America we know that was built after Jamestown, and called attention to the earlier cultural and historic treasures of the first Americans on our great public lands. And as our national consciousness has turned increasingly toward protecting our environment and conserving precious resources, Richard Moe has led his organization's role in fostering a more sustainable country under the simple but powerful message that preserving and reusing historic buildings is the greatest form of recycling.

His passionate interest in history and especially the events of the Civil War led to a deep and personal commitment to the restoration of President Lincoln's Cottage just 3 miles north of this Chamber. Now, solely as a result of Richard Moe's vision, this once forgotten "Camp David" of President Lincoln, where one of our most respected and celebrated Presidents lived and worked, is open to the public for the first time.

In the midst of all these accomplishments, Richard Moe wrote a Civil War history in 1993, "The Last Full Measure: The Life and Death of the First Minnesota Volunteers," and coauthored "Changing Places: Rebuilding Community in the Age of Sprawl" in 1997.

In 2007, he was awarded the National Building Museum's Vincent Scully

Prize, which recognized his leadership in moving historic preservation into the mainstream of public policy and expanding the public's awareness of our heritage's stewardship. That same year he also received the American Historical Association's Theodore Roosevelt-Woodrow Wilson Award for Public Service. Let me add to the many acknowledgements such as these my gratitude to Richard Moe and that of the entire Senate for his indelible contributions to our American political life and for his unceasing care for our national heritage. I know that even in retirement, he will continue to serve the people of the United States and I wish him well.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

LANCE CORPORAL JOSHUA M. DAVIS

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise to recognize the sacrifice of a brave young Iowan, LCpl Joshua M. Davis, who died from wounds he received while supporting combat operations in Helmand Province, Afghanistan. He was 19 years old. Josh's loss will be felt very deeply in his hometown of Perry, IA, where his drive and leadership skills were recognized early on as a member of the football and wrestling teams and SkillsUSA. He was determined to serve his country and joined the Marine Corps right after high school, even graduating a trimester early to start basic training. Accounts describe Lance Corporal Davis as humble, but his sense of patriotism and service humbles me and makes me proud to be an Iowan. Learning about the life of this remarkable young man makes the knowledge of his tremendous sacrifice all the more poignant. My thoughts and prayers will be with his family at this time, including his father Dave, his mother Beverly, and all those touched by his loss. I cannot adequately express the debt of gratitude we owe, but I ask all Senators to reflect on, and pay tribute to, the life of a great American, LCpl Joshua Davis.

IN SUPPORT OF JUDGE EDWARD CHEN

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, I rise to speak in support of Edward Chen, nominee for Federal judgeship in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California. Judge Chen has been a respected Federal magistrate judge for over 8 years. He is held in high regard by his judicial colleagues and by the attorneys, litigants, and witnesses who have appeared before him, including non partisan prosecutors and law enforcement officials. Judge Chen has issued hundreds of rulings in accordance with the rule of law, and without bias or unfairness. He has facilitated the fair settlement of hundreds of cases, ranging from complex business disputes to civil rights claims. For these reasons, Judge Chen received
